SUBSCRIBERS' NOTICE.

The majority of subscribers to the Standard desire that it shall not be discontinued when their subscriptions expire. This is the reason why, if you want the Standard discontinued to your address when the period for which payment has been made has expired, you are asked to notify the publisher by card, letter or personally, or notify your mail carrier. It is as easy to stop the Standard as it is to start it, and the paper will not be sent longer than you pay for it. If it is your desire that it be discontinued and so notify the publisher. One subscriber gets angry if we stop his paper, while another gets angry if we keep on sending it. The latter believes we want to force the paper on him. Please notify us if you want the Standard stopped.

NOT A CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR.

An appeal comes to the publisher of this paper, urging him to be a candidate for mayor this fall. Having served three times, Mr. Glasmann has been sufficiently honored in city affairs and has no desire to again serve as mayor. He openly confesses that he aims to go to congress. For years Ogden and Weber county have received very little recognition in state politics and, at a number of critical times, Ogden has suffered because the city has not been represented. Mr. Glasmann, in addition to gratifying a personal ambition, feels that as a congressman he could gain standing in the councils of the nation and do much for Utah and considerable for Ogden. A campaign for mayor would seriously interfere with his aspirations in the broader field of politics. He recognizes that many of the most urgent messages which reach him are from personal friends and admirers, and that equally insistent appeals are being made to others. Laboring for the best interests of Ogden, he is endeavoring to bring before the voters candidates of known worth in integrity and general ability as executive officers. He hopes there will be placed on a ticket this fall men who will pledge themselves to do their utmost to get Ogden City out of the rut it is now in; men who will protect the city's franchises, inaugurate economies and do something to hold down the rapidly increasing tax rate. Ogden's finances were never in a more deplorable condition than now and it is time the best men of the city set out to bring about a change.

The Standard's course in city affairs is not inspired by any ulterior motive such as the advancing of its publisher's political aims, but is prompted by earnest, ardent desires to defend the best interests of the people; to prevent the wholesale delivery of city assets in the form of franchises to private corporations; to check the spendthrift policy which has brought taxes up to over four per cent, notwithstanding assessed values have been boosted year after year; and, finally, to make the city officials responsive to the will of the people.

The Standard, in pursuing this course, is broad enough to neither attempt to favor its friends nor punish its enemies. We are primarily for Ogden and the people of Ogden.

THE CZAR AND THE GRAND DUKE.

Some uneasiness is manifested in the camps of the allies over the deposing of Grand Duke Nicholas as head of the Russian army. Military critics declare the Czar, who succeeds him, is not a strong man and the campaign in Russia may not be as well conducted as it has been.

The success of Russian arms, undoubtedly will not rest with the Czar. The ruler will be nothing more than nominal head of the army and strategy will be determined by a military board or a selected leader. No one man is deciding the movements of the great fighting forces. Perhaps no military commander has greater authority than Joffre of the French army, but he must lean on his generals and counsel with them.

Much of the work of commanding must be delegated. The army of today is a most complex organization. The one item of transportation calls for the highest quality of leadership. On each side are millions of men, who must be fed, clothed, and supplied with munitions of war. Heavy guns are to be moved, aeroplanes forwarded, camp equipment furnished, and any one of a thousand things, each one of which represents a big tonnage. This all must be available wherever called for. There are sudden forward moves, and in the case of Russia, quick retreats. Motor trucks, railroad cars and horse-drawn vehicles are demanded. Whoever is entrusted with this one responsibility must display wonderful ability, if success attends his efforts.

So each branch of the army must have a masterful mind, and for the whole army the combined wisdom of the most capable generals is employed.

The masterful retreat of the Russians may have been planned not by Grand Duke Nicholas, but by a number of army officers, and those same officers will continue to advise Czar Nicholas.

THE TRUE SITUATION IN THE WAR ZONE.

Lloyd-George is telling his people some unpleasant truths. In a review of the first year of the war, he openly admits that the Germans have had, and continue to hold, a superiority in equipment.

The might of Germany, he regrets to say, has exceeded the gloomiest prognostications. There will be victory for the allies, he says, provided the nations put forth the whole of their strength ere it is too late. Anything less must mean defeat.

"How many people in this country fully apprehend to its full significance the Russian retreat?" asks Lloyd-George. "For over twelve months Russia, despite deficiencies in equipment, has absorbed the energies of half the German and four-fifths of the Austrian forces. Is it realized that for the time being Russia has made his contribution to the struggle for European freedom and that we cannot for months to come expect the same active help from the Russian armies we have hitherto received? Who is to take the Russian place while those Russian armies are re-equipping? Who is to bear the weight which has hitherto fallen on Russian shoulders?

"France cannot be expected to sustain much heavier burdens than those she now bears with a quiet courage which has astonished and moved the world. Italy is putting her strength into the fight. There is only Britain left.

"Is Britain prepared to fill up the gap that will be created when Russia retreats to the rear? Is she fully prepared to cope with all the possibilities of the next few months in the west, without forgetting the east? Upon the answer will depend the liberties of Europe for many generations.

"A shrewd and sagacious observer told me the other day, in his judgment the course pursued by this country during the next three months would decide the fate of the war.

"But if we sacrifice all we own and all we like for our native land, and if our preparations are marked by grim resolutions and prompt readiness in every sphere, then victory is assured."

There you have the naked truth. The thought back of what Lloyd-George is saying is this:

Great Britain has not responded as she should have; the allies are in extreme danger of defeat; the British military leaders did not correctly measure Germany's strength at the outset; almost superhuman efforts must be made in the next three months if German militarism is not to sweep over the world.

The best informed and the most discerning American military writers have been saying what Lloyd-George now discloses. The outcome of the war depends on whether Great Britain today has 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 men to throw into the trenches in France, with an endless stream of ammunition to be poured out upon the Germans.

OUR NAVAL ADVISORY BOARD.

Secretary Daniels is to be congratulated on the organization of his naval advisory board, of which Thomas A. Edison is chairman.

On Sunday the announcement was made that nominations have been received and accepted from eleven great engineering and scientific societies, as follows:

American Aeronautical society—Judson Maxim, Brooklyn, ordinance and explosive expert; Matthew Bacon Sellers, Baltimore, authority on aerodynamics.

American Society of Automobile Engineers—Howard E. Coffin, Detroit, Mich., and Andrew J. Riker, Bridgeport, Conn., inventors, automobile builders and now vice presidents of large automobile manufacturing companies.

The Inventors' guild—Dr. Peter Cooper Hewitt, New York, inventor of appliances for telephones, hydroplanes, aeroplanes, balloons and electric lights, and Thomas Robbins, Stamford, Conn., inventor of many mechanical devices, including the belt conveyor for coal and ore.

American Chemical society—Dr. W. R. Whitney, Schenectady, N. Y., creator and director of the research laboratory of the General Electric company; L. H. Baekeland, Yonkers, N. Y., a native of Belgium, famed particularly for the invention of a photographic paper.

American Institute of American Engineers—Frank Julian Sprague, New York, an early assistant of Edison, who built the first electrically trained gun for the navy; Benjamin G. Lamme, Pittsburg inventor, and head of a committee which passes upon all Westinghouse inventions.

American Mathematical society—Robert Simpson Woodward, president of the Carnegie Institute at Washington, D. C., and an authority on astronomy. Dr. Arthur Gordon Webster, Worcester, Mass., professor of physics at Clark university.

American Society of Civil Engineers—Andrew Murray Hunt, New York, experienced in development of hydro-electric steam and gas plants; Alfred Craven, New York, chief engineer of the New York public service commission.

The American Institute of Mining Engineers—William Lawrence Saunders, New York, inventor and engineer, and Benjamin Bowditch Thayer, New York, metallurgist and explosive expert.

The American Electro-Chemical society—Dr. William Richards, South Bethlehem, Pa., professor of metallurgy at Lehigh university, and Lawrence Addicks, Chrome, N. J., metallurgical engineer.

The American Society of Mechanical Engineers—William Leroy Emmet, Schenectady, N. Y., engineer and inventor and first serious promoter of electric ship propulsion, and Spencer Miller, South Orange, N. J., inventor of apparatus that has simplified coaling of ships and of the breeches buoy device now used by the coast guard service.

The American Society of Aeronautical Engineers—Henry Alexander Wise Wood, regarded by many as the world's foremost authority on the engineering features of the art of printing, and Elmer A. Sperry, electrical inventor and manufacturer.

The list is an impressive one and from those keen intellects some wonderful war apparatus should be created.

There is one danger which must not be overlooked and that is the possibility of our own weapons being turned on us. Our inventions should be held as secrets and to do so a means must be provided of guarding against the duplicity and treachery which go with the spy systems of one or more European powers.

If the people realized the value of the big Selig 5-reel, "Days of the Thundering Herd," there wouldn't be a vacant seat afternoon or evening at the Alhambra.

DR. C. E. COULTER DIES AT HIS HOME ON 24TH STREET

Dr. Chester E. Coulter, one of Ogden's best known citizens and physicians, died yesterday at 12:45 p. m. at the residence, 1257 Twenty-fourth street. Death was due to Bright's disease, of which the physician had suffered the past two years.

He was born at Carroll, Iowa, February 5, 1856, and is survived by his wife, Mary Geigus Coulter; a son, Halvor G. Coulter, a first lieutenant in the United States army, at present an instructor at West Point; and a daughter, John H. Coulter of Los Angeles. His early childhood and youth were passed on a farm in Illinois and he taught school in Michigan before taking up the study of medicine at the University of Michigan. Following his graduation from the University of Michigan medical school, Dr. Coulter practiced medicine at Fremont, Ill., and Los Angeles, Cal. He came to Ogden 26 years ago and had been an active practitioner in this city ever since.

In addition to following his profession, the deceased was active for many years in local civic and educational affairs, being at one time city physician and a member of the board of education. He was a member of the Unitarian church and the only society to which he belonged was the Wasatch Council of the National Union.

Dr. Coulter was highly respected by his fellow practitioners, and, in speaking of him last night, one of them said:

"He was one of the old school, who not only administered medicine, but also aided his patients with advice not necessarily pertaining to their physical welfare."

The funeral services will be held tomorrow at 1:30 in the Kirkendall chapel, Reverend Carver officiating. The body will be taken to Salt Lake at 1:10 p. m., over the Oregon Short Line, for interment.
